

CRABS

San Francisco Style

Traps baited with squid are stacked on the deck waiting to be planted.

The crabs are a delicacy—but it's no delicate job to catch them.

For a San Francisco crab boat skipper, work begins well before the crabbing season opens. Even during the salmon season which precedes crabbing, he spends his free evenings mending crab traps. They measure 36 inches in diameter, are made from construction bar iron and stainless steel mesh, and are attached to about 15 fathoms of line and a float.

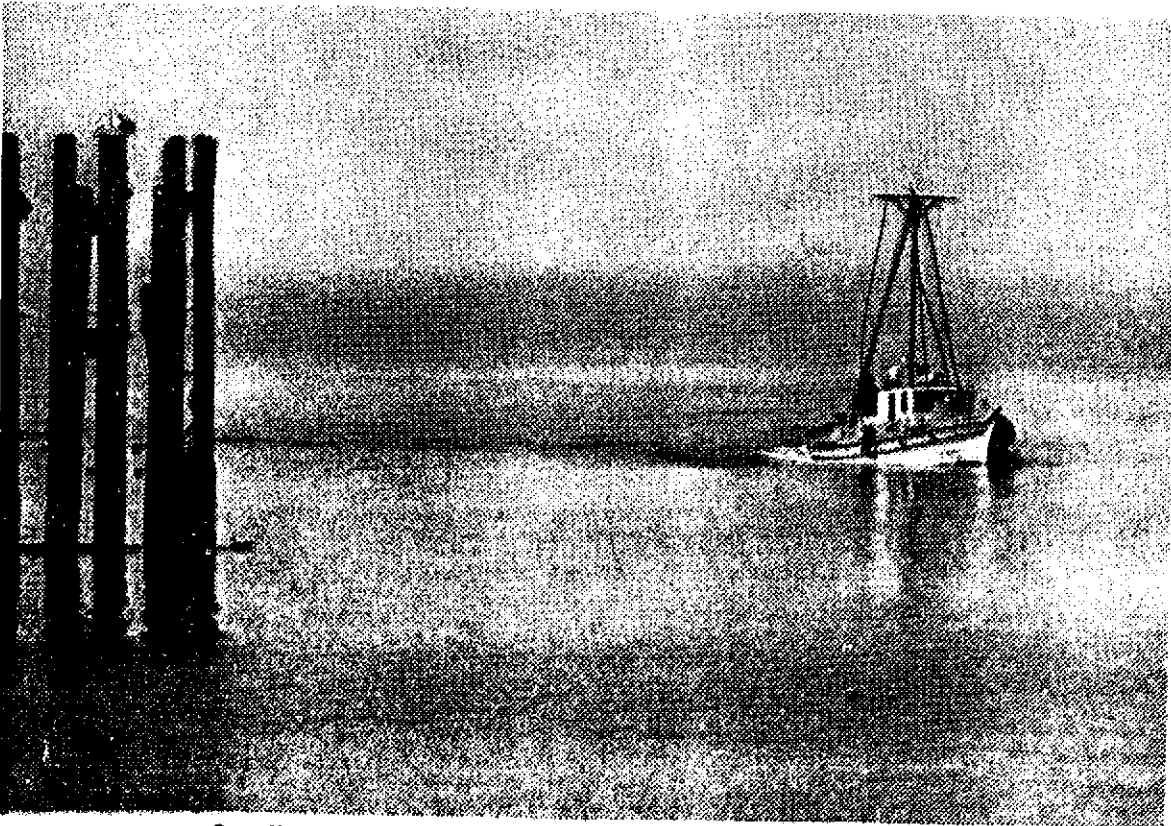

The day before crabbing begins, the traps are loaded on to the boats, and at early dawn the fishermen head out of the Golden Gate to plant the traps, maybe six or so miles out to sea. The traps are baited with squid; it takes several hours to plant them, and they are then left overnight.

On opening day, the boats go out again and harvesting begins. The traps are hoisted on to the deck, the crabs are quickly removed, sized and thrown into separate boxes. In a matter of minutes the traps are re-baited and heaved over the side again. The line is paid out and the float in place.

You don't work crabs from inside, but from the awash deck of a boat which has seen three or four decades of sturdy service. Hip boots, slicker and rubber apron are needed to keep dry even when the weather's perfect. And cotton gloves are indispensable to protect hands as they grapple with lines, rough steel—and crabs.

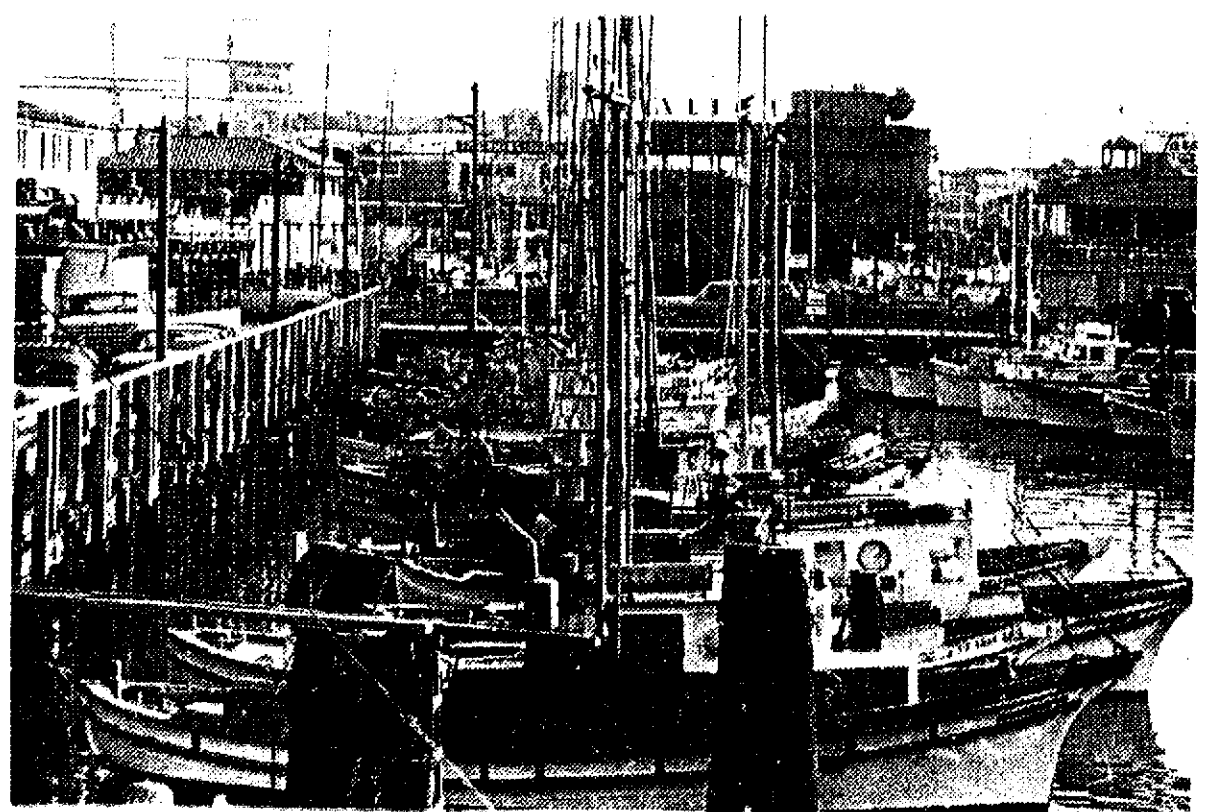

Steel trap is heaved out at the end of a 90-foot line.

Small, sturdy crab boat works from San Francisco harbor.

Crab harvest—to be handled with care.

Gloria, a dark-eyed brunette who wears lightly her official stamp as 1969's most beautiful girl in the universe, reached the Miami finals last July after winning the "Miss Philippines" preliminary. One of the 12 children of Mr. and Mrs. Jaime Diaz, Gloria says she went into the original contest during a vacation from college when "I had nothing much to do and it seemed like fun."

She has had plenty to do during the past 12 months. She has traveled to South America, Australia, many areas of the United States and Canada representing companies that sponsored last season's pageant. She has learned to cope gracefully with autograph hunters, discourage elderly—over 25—wolves, and keep in shape one basic makeup job including eyelashes, with occasional patching, for 18 or more hours of personal appearances.

Surprisingly few winners of the pageants go on to important careers in show business. Among past Miss Americas, Bess Myerson Grant, who won her title before the pageant was televised, was a television program panelist and then became New York City's commissioner for consumer affairs. Lee Ann Merriweather is a featured performer in television, and Marilyn Van Derbur also keeps busy in television. And that is about the list.

Among the Miss Universe winners, the top career girl is Corinna Tsopei of Greece, who won in 1964 and currently is featured in a film, "A Man Called Horse."

Bob Thomas at the Movies

By BOB THOMAS

Associated Press Writer HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Meet Sugar Ray Robinson, actor.

"I've been a ham all my life," he explains. "Why shouldn't I get paid for it?"

The former middleweight and welterweight boxing champion is getting paid regularly for the acting chores. He just finished a role as a policeman in National General's "What Are We Going to Do without Skipper?" He has also played roles in such television series as "Mannix," "Mission: Impossible," "Land of the Giants" and next season's "Barefoot in the Park."

Not to mention the beer commercial he did with Rocky Graziano. "The residuals are great, but I wish it had been for a soft drink," he says. "I don't drink beer."

He's selective about his film roles: "I was up for a good part at Fox, but they wanted me to play a dope fiend. I couldn't do it. I spent too many years building up a good name; that means more to me than the championship."

As he himself indicated, Robinson has been acting for a long time. Before, he was mainly playing Sugar Ray Robinson. Now he enacts other roles as well.

"So far I haven't taken any acting lessons, and I don't think I will," he remarks. "I've talked about this to friends of mine like Dick Burton, Frank Sinatra and Marlon Brando. They tell me that some actors study for years to be able to move the way that I do naturally."

"Maybe if I studied what I was doing, I'd spoil it."

Sugar Ray will be 49 next month, but you'd never know it. His belly is as flat and hard as when he was decking all comers in the ring. He weighs approximately one pound over his fighting weight of 160. He philosophizes:

"If you don't keep your body alive, it won't keep you alive; that's what I believe. If I don't get down to the gym to work out and relieve my frustrations on the boxing bag, I don't feel right. And I never ride elevators; I walk up the stairs instead."

Robinson has a new calling which he feels is more important than his careers in boxing and acting. That's the Sugar Ray Robinson Youth Foundation. He now is devoting most of his spare time to it, organizing events, making appearances and raising funds.

He has the cooperation of the

HELEN HELP US!

YOUTH ASKED FOR IT!

This column is for young people, their problems and pleasures, their troubles and fun. As with the rest of Helen Help Us!, it welcomes laughs but won't dodge a serious question with a brush off.

Send your teenage questions to YOUTH ASKED FOR IT, care of Helen Help Us! this newspaper.

Dear Helen: Here's one for your Teen Boost of the Month. Each year the Luther League, a teen youth organization of Gethsemane Lutheran Church in San Antonio, Texas, has a milk drive. They collect canned evaporated milk for babies in our welfare centers.

This year their goal was 350 cans, but their enthusiasm was so contagious that, when the count was made, they found they had 20 cases—4,000 cans. They certainly spread the milk of human kindness—CHUECH MEMBER

Dear Helen: So often you have letters from teens who can't get with their parents. So I want to tell you about a very happy family—my own.

There are 10 of us. We are all very close. Whenever we have a problem we can go to our parents without fear of being shunned. They listen and help. Sure we have disagreements. We're human, but we discuss them and you would be surprised at how often we learn to laugh at them.

We all help around the house, and sometimes we get in our mother's way but she doesn't mind. Just as long as we are happy, she and my father are too.

Some of the kids who complain "my folks don't understand me" should try to understand their folks first. That usually helps. At least in our family it does.—PAT

Dear Helen: I'm an average female teenager. Like other I'm not sure of myself or my decisions. My Mom is the greatest. She has never treated me as a stupid child who couldn't know trouble if it sat on her. She knows more about my faults, assets, failures, triumphs and many problems than anyone else does. She may not be perfect (she's the first to admit it), but she lets me think for myself and with just the right amount of help, I just want to thank her for being my friend, my doctor, my lawyer, my psychiatrist—and, most of all, my mother!—R.G.K.

Los Angeles Council of Churches and is working on a San Francisco branch. His current aim is to organize a statewide Olympic Games for youth of all races.

Dear Helen: I'm writing this to set girls with kid brothers straight. They aren't that bad. I have a 13-year old brother with a paper route. He's always willing to lend me money, at only a small interest rate. He even does his share of the housework, if I feed him constantly.

He can repair anything from an earring to a broken heel. And he'll do it, too, because I have learned the secret: Praise and appreciation. I think his jokes are funny, and I think he's great, and I let him know it.—BROTHER APPRECIATOR

Dear Helen: We were married when I was 17 and my husband was barely 18. We've had our share of troubles, but you know, Helen, we are envied by all our friends and relatives. We never have fights, they say. Half of course we do, but even in the midst of a battle royal, we know that we truly love each other and are just letting off steam.

We share everything, even those nutty little thoughts that ordinary people would think silly. He's my date on special evenings. He doesn't bring me flowers or candy (I'd faint if he did), but my biggest moment in the day is when he walks in the door and says, "Hi, honey, I'm home!"

While I won't ever recommend teen marriages to our children, I know they CAN work. Ours has, for nine years, and it gets better all the time.—MRS. H.D.W.

To Head College at Age 23

NEW YORK (AP) — Last year he was a student. This year he was a special assistant with the Board of Education. Next fall Leon Botstein will become president of Franconia College in New Hampshire at age 23.

"Certainly, there will be no generation gap," he said Thursday after his appointment was announced. "With only 250 students in the college I should get to know each one personally."

"He'll be the youngest college president in the nation," said the Rev. Paul W. Rahmeier, head of the Board of Trustees at the experimental college in the White Mountains near Franconia, N.H.

"We interviewed 16 other candidates for the job, all older," he added. "But we concluded that since Leon was best qualified his age was irrelevant."

The argument about today's hand undoubtedly was full of sound and fury. For all we know it may still be raging down in Fort Lauderdale where our correspondent wants to know just how the bidding should have gone.

As far as we can gather, North objected strenuously to his partner's rebid of one no-trump with a good five-card suit and no stopper in clubs.

North pointed out correctly that nothing could beat four hearts while as anyone can see the defense ran off five clubs against three no-trump.

We consider this whole thing a real tempest in a teapot. To start with, if clubs divided 4-3 or 6-1 (barring all three honors with the six) three no-trump would be unbeatable and if East held the king of spades instead of West the odds are that four hearts would bite the dust.

Furthermore, we wonder what North would have done if his partner had rebid to two hearts. At this point we know that North claimed he would have jumped to four hearts (we have our correspondent's word for that), but would he have done so at the table or would he have thought to himself "Damn the torpedoes, full steam ahead" and jumped to three no-trump.

He would probably have done very well at that contract. He would probably run off five hearts and three diamonds as a starter and then would lead the jack of spades

'With-it' Patio Chairs

By JOANNE SCHREIBER

If you've finished making the summer slipcovers for the living room, how about an extra matching set for the directors' chairs out on the patio?

It's not as far-out an idea as it might sound at first. If your outdoor party is rained out, those comfortable, canvas chairs are going to be brought in for extra seating. And if they are attractively slipcovered, you'll take credit as the best-prepared hostess in town.

Even if your patio party comes off as scheduled, you can still achieve indoor-outdoor co-ordination with slipcovers—and add a festive note to the proceedings.

Choose a fabric that is pretty enough to use indoors, and tough enough for outside use. A versatile multipurpose material is made of 50 per cent Fortrel and 50 per cent cotton, is machine-washable and dryable and has been equipped by Celanese with durable press and soil-resistant finishes. What is more, it comes in a good collection of with-it designs. In 48-inch width, one yard is plenty for each chair.

To make a slipcover stay with no intention of flinching and jeopardizing game and rubber, but it is just possible that East would have discarded a spade somewhere along the way and that West would cover that jack. If that happened, the queen of spades would drop the 10 and North would make all his spades.

All conjecture but unimportant. We believe that almost any expert would have made the same no-trump rebid that South did make.

Dressed for a party is this director's chair, with its slipcover of bright flag blue with white cane pattern, in a new fabric by Australian designer Lemeau.

in position, you can attach strips of Velcro in strategic spots.

Cut back and seat sections of cover, using old cover as a guide and allowing 1/2-inch extra all around for ease, plus necessary hem allowances.

Finish the back cover to same width as former cover.

Cut seat section with margin for overlap in front and back, to accommodate Velcro strip. Put in hems. Attach a narrow Velcro strip vertically to ends of back cover with matching strips on back of former cover.

Attach Velcro strips to chair seat section, at front and back on underneath sides. Attach matching strips to new fabric section, so cover will turn under to join Velcro strips.

There are two other approaches to recovering directors' chairs. You may sew the new cover to the old cover, top-stitching in position. This will give you a permanent cover with double strength. Or you may remove the old cover entirely and substitute the new cover. In this case, be sure the fabric you use is strong

Virgin Forest The most extensive virgin forest in the world today is the Amazon Valley forest extending from the Atlantic coast into the foothills of the Andes and from Bolivia through Colombia, Venezuela and the Guianas.

So You Want To Be A Lineman By ERNIE HOOD

One-fifth of all the workers employed by electric light and power systems are in transmission and distribution jobs maintaining the flow of electric power to users. They are the dispatchers and substation operators and the men who construct and maintain the powerlines—linemen, cable slicers, troublemen, groundmen and helpers.

Linemen, who make up the largest occupation in the industry, install and replace equipment, do repairs and perform routine maintenance.

When wires, cables or poles break, it means an emergency call for a line crew. Linemen splice or replace broken wires and cables and replace broken insulators or other damaged equipment.

In some power companies, linemen specialize in particular types of work. Those in one crew may work only on new construction and others may do only repair work. In some instances, linemen specialize on high-voltage lines, using special "hot line" tools to avoid interruptions in the flow of current.

Skilled linemen (journeymen) usually qualify for such jobs after about four years of on-the-job training. In some companies, this training consists of a formal apprenticeship program.

The apprenticeship program combines on-the-job training and classroom instruction in blueprint reading, elementary electrical theory, electrical codes, and methods of transmitting electrical currents.

The apprentice usually begins his training by helping the groundman to set poles in place and by passing tools and equipment up to the lineman. After a training period of about six months, the apprentice begins to do simple linework on lines with low voltage.

While on this work, he is under the immediate supervision of a journeyman lineman or the line foreman. After about a year, he is assigned to more difficult work but is still under close supervision. During the last six months of his apprenticeship, the trainee does about the same kind of work as the journeyman lineman but with more supervision. After several years of experience, he may advance from lineman to troubleman.

Candidates for linework should be strong and in good physical condition, since climbing poles and lifting lines and equipment is strenuous work, and in all kinds of weather. They must also have steady nerves and good balance to work at the tops of the poles and to avoid the hazards of live wires and falls.

Most cable splicers get their training on the job, usually taking about four years to become qualified.

Several thousand job opportunities are expected to be available in transmission and distribution occupations during the 1970s.

Dodgers Take San Diego by 4-1 Tally

By HERSHEL NISSENSEN

The Los Angeles Dodgers finally gave up a run and the Atlanta Braves finally scored one, but it was too little to end the Dodgers' winning streak and too late to stop the Braves' skid.

Claude Osteen extended the Dodger pitching staff's scoreless skid to 25 innings in a 4-1 victory over San Diego, the fourth straight Los Angeles triumph. The Braves made it four straight setbacks, bowing to San Francisco 4-1, and had gone 28 innings without a run until Hal King homered in the ninth.

Elsewhere in the National League, Montreal edged the New York Mets 6-5, Cincinnati shaded Houston 3-2 and St. Louis trounced Philadelphia 7-0. The Chicago Cubs were rained out in Pittsburgh.

In the American League, Baltimore ripped Washington 12-2, the Chicago White Sox upended Minnesota 4-2, California nipped Kansas City 5-4, Milwaukee outlasted Oakland 3-2 in 15 innings and Detroit whipped Cleveland 7-1. The Yankees and Boston were washed out in New York.

Osteen, 10-7, tamed the Padres on six hits before a Helmet Night throng of 55,110, largest crowd of the National League season and the largest regular season attendance ever at Dodger Stadium, which opened in 1962.

Wes Parker drove in a run in the first inning. Bill Sudakis homered in the second and Willie Davis sent a run across in the third. Sudakis singled home the Dodgers' final run in the sixth. San Diego's only run came in the sixth on a walk and a double by Clarence Gaston.

The victory kept the Dodgers nine games behind Cincinnati in the NL West and extended the Padres' losing streak to six games.

San Francisco's Gaylord Perry became the major's first 12-game winner—he has lost six—by holding the Braves to three hits. Perry had retired 15 consecutive batters when King homered to lead off the ninth.

Bobby Bonds opened the Giants' first with a homer off Ron Reed and they wrapped it up in the third on a single by Bonds, Bobby Heise's triple and Willie McCovey's single. Ken Henderson singled in the eighth and scored on Alan Gallagher's triple.

Two Grand Slams by Robinson

By TOM SALADINO

Associated Press Sports Writer

With two swipes of the bat, Frank Robinson's aching back was all but forgotten, but not by the Washington Senators, who will remember the Baltimore slugger only as a pain in the neck.

Robinson, the Orioles' 34-year-old superstar, cracked consecutive grand slam home runs Friday night, leading Baltimore to a 12-2 trouncing of the Senators. He became the seventh player to hit two or more in a game.

The 6-foot-1, 190-pounder drilled his blasts in the fifth and sixth innings off righthander Joe Coleman and lefty Joe Grzenda, upping his season total to 14 roundtrippers and giving him 44 runs batted in with the eight Friday night. He is also hitting .332.

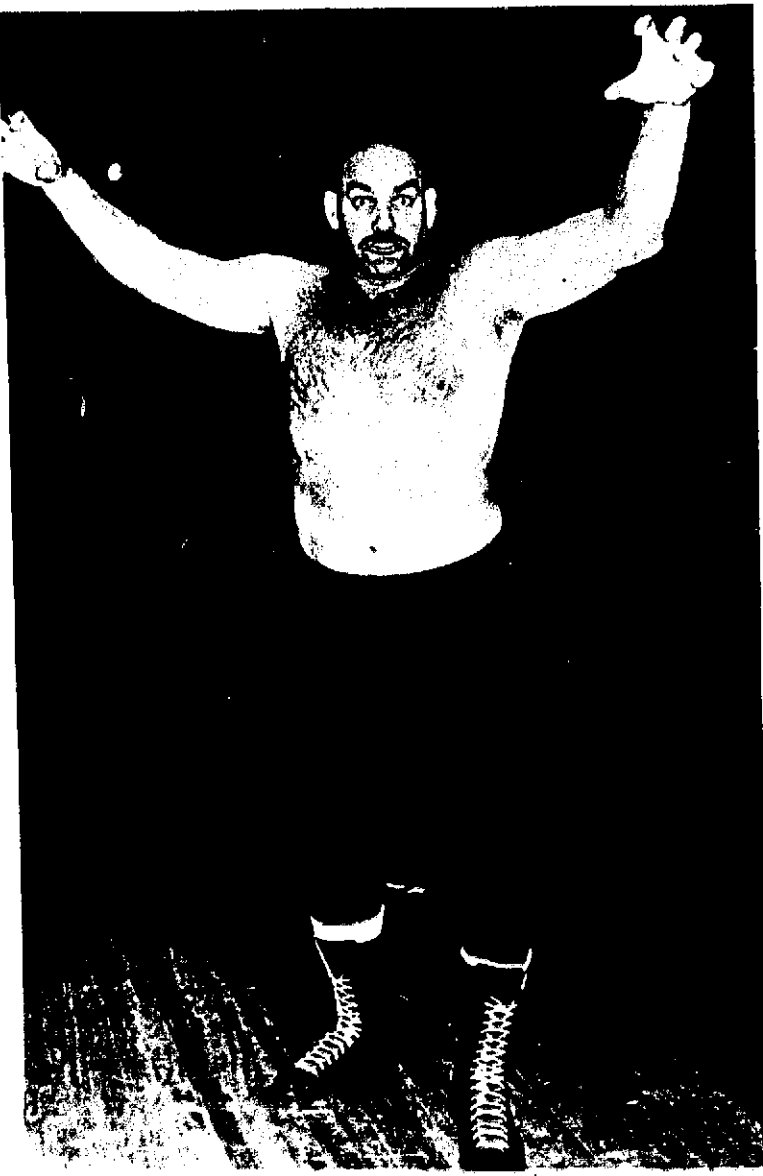

A .305 lifetime hitter in 14 major league seasons, the only player ever to win the Most Valuable Player Award in both leagues, injured his back making a catch in Boston Thursday night and was a questionable starter.

"My back is sore, but I could play," he said. His first homer was to right center field, "Coleman threw it outside," Bobby said. And his next against Grzenda went into the upper stands in left center field. "Grzenda put it right down the middle."

In other American League games, California edged Kansas City 6-5, Detroit whipped Cleveland 7-1, Chicago stopped Minnesota 4-2, Milwaukee overcame Oakland in 15 innings, 3-2, and the Boston Red Sox at New York Yankees game was postponed by rain.

In the National League, Montreal nipped New York 6-5, St. Louis blanked Philadelphia 7-0, Cincinnati tipped Houston 3-2, Los Angeles sailed over San Diego 4-1 and San Francisco beat Atlanta 4-1. The Chicago at Pittsburgh contest was called by rain.

OLDERMAN Yanks' Sheppard Heard, Not Seen

By MURRAY OLDERMAN

NEW YORK—(NEA)—On a drowsy summer Sunday, shaded by the tiers of Yankee Stadium, Bob Sheppard can almost make it through an absorbing best-selling novel—if the Yankees are playing a doubleheader.

His focus is disturbed only when a new batter comes to the plate, or there's a change in pitchers—and in pearly, pontifical tones the announcement goes out over the stadium loudspeaker system, delivered by Bob Sheppard.

The card he hands you says, "Robert Leo Sheppard, Speech Consultant," but for the last 20 years he has been the anonymous voice blaring the advent of talents such as Mickey Mantle, Whitey Ford and Yogi Berra, plus all the great players who have come through the American League.

The stadium announcer thrives only on clarity of delivery and must be resigned to obscurity.

"Ballplayers don't know who I am," admits Sheppard. "If I walked into their clubhouse, not one would recognize me. But I know they imitate my style in the bullpen."

The Sheppard vocalizing is distinctive—low-key Gabriel Heatter in sepulchral drag. He could make Joe Pepitone coming to the plate sound like an English butler announcing dinner.

"Only once," says Sheppard, "have my emotions intruded. Casey Stengel ran out of catchers one day and in the ninth inning I had to announce a lineup change. 'Now catching for New York,' I said, and looked at the player's number. 'Hank Bauer?!!?!'"

Like Joseph Cotten's incredulous radio line, "—Sonny Tufts?" Sheppard's mellifluous voice has been otherwise infallible.

And stadium announcing has only been a sideline to him all these years. He was a speech teacher for 38 years—at St. John's University, Adelphi College and then head of the speech departments for New York City high schools. He has also given graduate courses at the American Institute of Banking and, now retired from active teaching, conducts seminars at the American Savings and Loan Institute.

"A couple of athletes now in the broadcast business," he confides, "came to me for private lessons."

But, except for occasional interview appearances, Sheppard never made a move to get behind a radio or television microphone.

"Sure," he says, "there was a lot more money in it. Yet I never envied Mel Allen and Phil Rizzuto their lives—the travel, the uncertainty, having to cater to so many people. They come and go—Allen and Red Barber—and I remain. 'It's lovely. I do 70 baseball dates in 365 days. All day long I'm at the beach.'"

He also handles the loudspeaker for the football Giants. Football is how he actually got into the business. A promoter putting on a game in Freeport, L.I., between the Chicago Rockets and New York Yankees of the extinct All-American Conference knew that Sheppard was a speech teacher. He also knew that Bob was a prominent semipro football and baseball player. So he hired him for the loudspeaker chores. Branch Rickey, then in football as owner of the Brooklyn Dodgers, was in the stands and hired Bob to do his games. After the season, the Dodgers folded and merged with the Yanks, and Sheppard came along.

He is as dignified in person as he sounds—tall, gray, bronzed by the sun, neatly dressed. He sees himself in the tradition of baseball's greatest umpires—"you're hardly ever noticed."

He also likes the hours. And the pace. The way some pitchers fiddle around, he can get a chapter of his novel read between batters.

Phils, '70 Hopetfuls, Stub Toe on Jinxes

By TOM SEAVER

NEW YORK (NEA) Before this baseball season started some people predicted that the Philadelphia Phillies were going to be contenders for the pennant in the Eastern Division of the National League.

The Phillies were going into the season with a young team and with good pitching—and wasn't that the same combination that won it all for the New York Mets in 1969? Since then, however, a lot of things have happened to the Phillies—most of it bad.

If nothing else, the Phillies are now leading the major leagues in perseverance. No team in baseball has been hit with the number of injuries the Phillies have suffered in the first three months of this season and yet, astonishingly, the Phils were only six games under the .500 mark the last time I checked the standings.

The Phillies are, with no competition whatsoever, the hard-luck team of 1970. But to touch upon what has happened to this team, you have to go back before the season started. The Phillies' troubles began in the off-season when Curt Flood refused to report to them and decided to challenge the baseball reserve clause instead. With him out, they lost one of the best centerfielders in the game.

Once the season started, the injuries piled up and when they came into New York for a recent weekend series I hardly recognized them. They had a right-fielder in the lineup I had never heard of before and their catcher was Doc Edwards, who started the season as a bullpen coach. But to fully appreciate what this team has been going through, you have to look at the list of players it has lost because of injuries. They are:

• Tim McCarver, one of the game's best catchers. He broke his right hand in a game against San Francisco. His replacement, Mike Ryan, went in and, in the very same inning, broke his left hand, so the Phils were forced to call up Mike Compton, a young catcher from Eugene, Ore. He lasted three weeks—he hurt his side one day in batting practice—and the Phils were left without a catcher. They called out to the bullpen, finally, and activated Edwards.

• Third baseman Don Money, who was off to a good start and was showing everybody that he was going to be one of the National League's better hitters for a long time. He was hit by a ground ball just below his right eye. Denny Doyle, the second baseman, bruised his shoulder sliding into third base and his replacement, Terry Harmon, was hit in the face with a line drive during pregame warmups.

SHAVING STROKES

Be Nervous

I suppose, playing in programs week after week, I see some of the most nervous people in the world. Invariably, I will have at least one partner who is worried almost sick about playing with a touring pro and who lets his nervousness disrupt his normal game, which might be fairly effectual.

If you ever play in a program, just remember there is no shot you can show me that I haven't already seen. In fact, I've hit them all myself at one time or another. I remember Dave Marr talking about one of his pro-am partners who was so nervous he imbedded his clubhead several inches into the ground well behind the ball trying to hit a simple approach shot, and a huge hunk of sod just sort of slowly folded over and obscured the ball. That's an extreme case, but nervousness can work against you if you let it.

The thing is, I want to be nervous, especially before I begin a round. It shows I care a lot about the tournament. I know I'm ready to play. Byron Nelson, who won 18 official tournaments 25 years ago in 1945, the PGA record, frequently couldn't keep his breakfast on his stomach before he teed off. He worried if he could eat.

The trick is to control your nervousness, to channel it so that it works for you. And don't be afraid because you're nervous. Warm up sufficiently. Take a few deep breaths. Then, after you tee off, take less club, maybe even two clubs less. The adrenalin will be flowing, and you'll hit the ball farther. But be glad you're nervous.

Just A Note, But Cheaper

A yellow slip of paper, three by five inches, is the best proof we've seen lately that Washington is trying to save the taxpayers' money. The printed memo, dated and signed in ink, says:

"To speed our reply, we are using this informal way of giving you the information you requested. Your inquiry was welcomed and received careful attention. A formal letter would have taken longer. We feel that a prompt response is more important to you and hope that you agree. Thank you."

We not only agree; we applaud. And we hope other branches of the federal government will follow this good example set by the Census Bureau. The expenses wiped out by the printed missive are obvious in man-hours and woman-hours unsent in dictating a letter, transcribing it and filing copies, not to mention the cost of a typewriter, letterhead, carbon paper, typist's desk and office space for all these. — Miami (Fla.) Family Aid Bill Urged by Nixon

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Nixon administration today prodded the Senate to act on welfare reform and signed a $2.3 million contract with Vermont for a partial test of the proposed family assistance measure.

"We are hopeful that the Senate Finance Committee will schedule hearings in the very near future and that the family assistance plan will be enacted into law by the 91st Congress," said Elliot Richardson, secretary of Health, Education and Welfare.

Family assistance has passed the House but is stalled in the Senate committee.

"As a valuable operational testing ground and an important learning experience the Vermont project will make a valuable contribution to the effectiveness and success of the plan," Richardson said.

Vermont will develop a model plan for converting existing state welfare systems to federally based family assistance. It will also expand complementary plans of day care for children and job training.

Family assistance would replace existing, major welfare programs with a cash payments to all working and nonworking poor families with children.

Family heads, except for mothers with small children and the ill, would have to register for and accept work or training.

A family of four would receive a minimum income of $1,600 a year from the government. Food stamps would add another $720 a year and the state would be required to continue supplementary payments.

The federal contract will allow Vermont to double to approximately $400 its available work training opportunities.

Day-care openings, both all-day and part-day would be increased from about 300 to 2,100. The state will plan but not implement the cash outlay portion of family assistance.

16 Caught in Drug Roundup

LITTLE ROCK (AP) — Police arrested 16 persons on drug charges Thursday in Little Rock and Pulaski County. Police Chief Gale Weeks of Little Rock said the arrests, made at businesses and private residences, were the result of a joint investigation of federal, state and local agencies. The arrests began at 4 a.m. Thursday and ended at 2 p.m.

Most all of those taken into custody were released after posting $1,000 bond.

Tragic Incidents in the Lives of the Old and Helpless

By TOMMY YATES
Associated Press Writer
LITTLE ROCK AP— "We've gone into several homes during the winter and found that the people had turned on the gas and not lighted it."

"One lady living in public housing had done this twice and the housing people thought she ought to be placed in a nursing home. We suggested that a two-burner hot plate be placed in her room and that the gas be disconnected. We did and she is still living there and is very happy."

"One day volunteers went to a home and saw a man sitting in a chair but he was not moving. With the help of a neighbor, we got in a back window and found that the man had had a stroke and was unable to move. We got him to a hospital and he recovered."

"One lady fell and broke her hip on a Friday and lay there until we went back Monday. She is recovering in a nursing home."

These instances are the by-products of the Senior Citizens Food Service, a Meals-on-Wheels-type program at Texarkana, which is rolling down an avenue of success of greater length than the program director had dreamed.

Mrs. Dorothy Raker, the director, related these incidents that volunteer workers in the program have experienced since operation of the program for both sides of Texarkana began last August.

Mrs. Raker was in Little Rock this week helping set up a Meals-on-Wheels-type program in Little Rock-North Little Rock. She said in an interview that the Little Rock program should be going in about a month to six weeks to become the second such program in the state.

The Texarkana program began on Aug. 25, 1969, serving 28 persons a hot meal at noon five days a week. The number grew to 58 persons in September and the program now provides meals to 120 persons.

Total cost of the Arkansas-side program is $31,926 and cost of the program on the Texas side is $38,000. Money is provided by the federal government to the Arkansas Office on Aging, which determines which projects are needed in the state. During the first year of operation, the federal grants is 75 per cent of the cost and 25 per cent is local money. For the second year, federal participation is 60 per cent and 40 per cent is local and for the third year, costs are split 50-50. Each meal cost $1.25, which the program encourages the meal recipients to pay.

"We do hope to get on a self-supporting basis with just a little supplement," Mrs. Raker said.

Persons eligible to receive the meals in the Texarkana program have to be at least 60 years old and there has to be a need.

Need does not necessarily mean financial, Mrs. Raker said.

A person has to be unable physically or mentally to prepare a balanced meal for himself, she explained. She said the mental aspect means that sometime the elderly just have lost an incentive to cook.

Another requirement, Mrs. Raker said, is that the person have a regular doctor and that the person has visited the doctor within the previous six months, "so the doctor can tell us what sort of diet he wants his patient to have."

"When a person has not seen a doctor, we suggest making an appointment," she said, "and we've uncovered cases of diabetes and all sorts of dietary problems the persons wouldn't have known if not for this program."

Food for the meals is prepared by a catering establishment that works with the program's part-time dietitian. The food is placed in fiberglass bags and delivery routes are set up so that it does not take the volunteer delivering the food more than 45 minutes to complete his route.

"Our agency also has a recreation program," Mrs. Raker said, in which those able participate once a week in the program "to get them back into living again instead of just existing."

The paid staff of the Texarkana program includes a director, a secretary-bookkeeper and the part-time dietitian, along with eight visitation consultants, who are paid for 10 hours work a week. Volunteers who deliver the meals and do other work donate 600 to 800 hours a month, Mrs. Raker said.

"We've had a lot of requests about setting up a meals program," she said. "They think it takes 26 hours a day, eight days a week to get it going."

Englishman Rows Over Atlantic

By DENNIS FRIEL
Associated Press Writer
MIAMI (AP) — "I've got a man here who says he just rowed from England," the U.S. immigration officer said into the telephone. "And he doesn't have a visa."

Having received approval from his superior, the officer hung up and issued a 90-day visiting permit to Britisher Sidney Genders.

Genders had just completed a 6,000-mile solo pull across the Atlantic in a rowboat 19 feet, 9 inches long.

His welcoming party was the crew of a police patrol boat. They directed him to U.S. customs and immigration officers.

Genders, 51, said he made the trip to show that a man isn't washed up at 50.

The sturdy-built Britisher finished the voyage from Penzance, England, to Miami in 166 rowing days.

This is the season for boating of all kinds, and more people own boats than ever before. For that reason, we now have National Safe Boat Week. It is being observed this year June 29 to July 5, with all boat owners or renters being advised to learn the rules of safety on the water.

We have rules of the road for land vehicles, so why not the same thing for water vehicles? Well, rest assured we DO have the rules there, too, but the danger lies in whether they are observed or not. The human factor tips the scales in both cases.

Basic rules of water safety all have a common sense background. For instance, when you go out in a boat, keep on board as many life preservers as the number of people your boat will hold. Also make sure every child and every nonswimmer wears a Coast Guard-approved life jacket.

Never overload the boat. This is a simple rule that is so very often ignored. . . with tragic results.

Always check local weather warnings before taking out the boat. Be as careful with boat travel as in air travel. Watch out for a sudden squall and when the sky gets dark, head for the nearest harbor or dock.

Tell someone on the shore about your plans—where you are going, when you are coming back. In case something happens such as the loss of oars or motor, you won't be able to flag down a passing motorist for help. It will have to come from someone on shore.

Always have at least two people on board who can handle the boat and who know its limitations. This is a good rule for air travel, too, of course. Why else do airlines have co-pilots?

Before you start out, check your fuel supply. Also, before you refuel, always extinguish all flames and cigarettes and air the boat thoroughly. Even in the mist of an abundance of water, fire can be a real danger. For that reason, always carry a fire extinguisher.

One of the oldest rules is still a good one. If the boat capsizes, stay with it. It takes less effort to hang on than to swim, and rescuers can spot a boat easier

Up to now, we have listed rules that are plain, common sense. Now, we close with advice that is plain, common courtesy. Cut your speed in bathing areas and post a lookout in the bow to watch for swimmers. Being courteous makes everyone safer, and you will appreciate it when you are a swimmer instead of a boater.

The next time you have an outing on the water, have fun and don't rock the boat!

25th Year of United Nations

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — More than 200 officials and delegates to the 126-member United Nations gathered for a commemorative meeting today in San Francisco, where 50 countries signed the U.N. charter 25 years ago.

A four-hour afternoon anniversary program was scheduled at the War Memorial Opera House, where the charter was drafted at the U.N. organizing conference of April 25-June 26, 1945.

Messages from President Nixon and from former President Harry S. Truman were to be read.

Truman witnessed the signing of the 1945 charter in the War Memorial Veterans' Building beside the opera house.

Nixon was at his Western White House in San Clemente, Calif., and reports persisted that he might turn up either at the commemorative meeting or at a black-tie anniversary banquet later at the Fairmont Hotel.

San Francisco Mayor Joseph L. Alioto and California Gov. Ronald Reagan were scheduled for addresses of welcome at the opera house.

Among the other 13 listed speakers were two signers of the charter—Philippine Foreign Secretary Carlos P. Romulo and Turkish Sen. Feridun Cemal Erkin.

Others were two former presidents of the U.N. General Assembly as is Romulo: Italian Senate President Amintore Fanfani and Romanian Foreign Minister Corneliu Manescu, and the present president Miss Angie Brooks, Liberian assistant secretary of state.

Irish Riot Over Jailing of Devlin

By ANDREW TORCHIA
Associated Press Writer
LONDON (AP) — Protestants, Catholics and British troops battled in the streets of three Northern Ireland cities Friday night in riots touched off by the jailing of civil rights leader Bernadette Devlin.

The violence began after Miss Devlin, 23, the youngest member of the British House of Commons, lost her last appeal and began a six-month sentence on charges of helping incite the Catholic-Protestant riots in Northern Ireland last year.

More than 1,000 Protestants and Catholics were involved in Friday night's disturbances in Londonderry, Armagh, and Belfast, the capital of predominantly Protestant Northern Ireland. The rioting in Londonderry lasted five hours. Fourteen persons were arrested and 22 soldiers were injured, three requiring hospitalization.

Eight soldiers were injured in Belfast, four seriously. Two men were injured in two hours of disturbances in Armagh, where Miss Devlin went to begin her sentence in the women's jail.

The trouble in Belfast began when a Protestant procession ran into a rival march of Catholics protesting Miss Devlin's arrest. British troops firing tear gas separated the Protestant and Catholic crowds.

Police in Londonderry also fired tear gas grenades.

In London, about 70 Irish men and women marched to the Home Office to protest Miss Devlin's jail sentence. Police made six arrests.

Miss Devlin, leader of the Catholic minority in predominantly Protestant Londonderry, was scheduled to address 2,000 residents of the city's Bogside district before being taken to jail.

But 60 policemen intercepted her car and took her directly to Armagh.

When she reached the heavily guarded jail, demonstrators outside shouted, "God bless you Bernadette; you are a saint."

She rolled down a window of the car and replied: "Thank you for turning up, but please don't cause any trouble."

Arkansas Economy Is Ahead of U.S.

LITTLE ROCK (AP) — The state's economy progressed at a faster clip than the country as a whole during the 1960s, according to the spring issue of the Arkansas Business and Economic Review.

The magazine said, though, "in the case of certain indicators, the rate of growth in Arkansas has been only slightly higher than the U.S. growth rate, which means that the 'catch-up' period for Arkansas is still longer than the more optimistic among us would prefer."

The magazine is published quarterly by the Bureau of Business and Economic Research and the Industrial Research and Extension Center of the University of Arkansas.

The magazine said the gap between Arkansas and the country in per capita personal income decreased from a difference of 61 per cent in 1960 to 48 per cent in 1968. Per capita income in Arkansas rose from $1,372 to $2,304 during the eight-year period, compared to a rise from $2,215 to $3,412 for the nation.

Total employment in Arkansas increased from 563,600 in 1960 to 693,400 in 1969, or by 23 per cent, compared to 17 per cent for the nation. During the eight-year period, agricultural employment in the state declined from 89,200 to 62,100.

From 1958 through 1967, value added by manufacturing increased 165 per cent, compared to an 83 per cent increase for the nation.

Mutterings About July 4

By TOM SEPPY
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — The Honor America Day gala scheduled for July 4th could turn into "America's most massive red-white-and-blue bloodbath," says a group headed by Chicago 7 defendant Rennie Davis.

"The demonstration is billed as nonpartisan and nonpolitical when in fact it is not," said the Emergency Committee to Prevent a July 4th Fist Fight.

The group said the event would amount to an unscheduled Republican convention and invite a violent confrontation with 15,000 young people Davis predicted would show up for a planned July 4th "Smoke-in" pot party on the grounds of the Washington Monument.

Davis and 15 others went to the Honor America Day headquarters Wednesday in an attempt to discuss the program, get themselves included on the committee and gain office space but were told no one in authority was present.

They said the current plans, calling for appearances by comedian Bob Hope and evangelist Billy Graham, offer nothing for young people and the city's majority Negro population.

In a statement, the group recommended the Honor America Day committee revise its program in an effort to make "the young and old, black and white...feel more at ease, and...prevent July 4th from becoming a national disaster."

Whaling Industry Nearly Gone

LONDON (AP) — The future is dismal for the whaling industry, faced with declining sales and shrinking herds.

Fifteen members of the International Whaling Commission met in London this week for its 22nd annual conference to discuss the drastic shrinkage of the herds.

Ronald G. Wall of the British Ministry of Agriculture and Fisheries said that since 1952 the Antarctic quota—the number of whales the commission allows whalers to kill—has dropped from 16,000 to 2,700. The number of Antarctic whaling expeditions shrank from 20 to six.

Norway, once king of the whaling fleets, sent out only one expedition last season and none the year before—the first time in 50 years they did not sail the Antarctic whale seas.

Whale carcasses are towed to a factory ship where they are processed into meat for pet food, oil, bone and meal—the main products.

Whale oil 100 years ago was the main source of light. Now the sources are gas and electricity. The decline of the whale-bone corset worn by women early in the century also hit the industry.

Whale oil is still used in margarine, cosmetics, linoleum and printing ink.

The loss of markets is not the only reason for the industry's decline. In the past, whale herds have been subjected to uncontrolled slaughter.

Now with helicopters and sounding devices to locate the herds, the whaling fleets come under the commission's regulations governing time of year, number and size of the catch.

Nearly 2 million whales have been slaughtered since 1900.

Many species are near extinction. The blue whale, the largest of all creatures, was the worst sufferer. From 1948 to 1965, the catch dropped from 6,908 to a single one. It is doubtful whether more than 1,000 survive.

One problem of the whale population is that the whale fields cover vast stretches of the ocean thus the whales mate only at two or three-year intervals.

Dr. Colin Holloway, an international conservancy expert, noted that the quota set for last year had not been reached by the whaling fleets.

"If we can keep it that way there are good chances of a recovery," he said.

Mass Exit of Civilians in Cambodia

By RICHARD PYLE
Associated Press Writer
SAIGON (AP) — More than 8,000 Cambodian civilians and troops have been brought to South Vietnam in a massive emergency evacuation that means Cambodia has virtually abandoned its three northeastern provinces to the North Vietnamese.

A military spokesman in Saigon confirmed today that the Cambodians were pulled out of two towns, Labansiek and Bo Kheo, in a military operation that began June 24.

"The operation is now complete," the spokesman said.

The operation, originally announced as a drive to evacuate ethnic Vietnamese from the towns in Ratanakiri Province, was carried out by a 5,000-man ground force that pushed into Cambodia from Pleiku, South Vietnam. The refugees, including several hundred Cambodian troops, were brought out via Highway 19 to Pleiku and a nearby former U.S. base, Camp Enari.

South Vietnamese troops involved in the operation said the evacuated Cambodian soldiers had no weapons.

The pullout also was announced by a military spokesman in Phnom Penh, where officials had said earlier that both Labansiek and Bo Kheo were to be held "at all costs."

The Cambodian spokesman gave a slightly different version of the evacuation, saying only that Cambodian troops had been withdrawn from the two cities by air.

The pullout meant the Cambodians apparently have abandoned the country's three northeastern provinces—Ratanakiri, Mondulkiri and Stung Treng—to the Viet Cong and North Vietnamese.

Bo Kheo and Labansiek are located in the area where the Ho Chi Minh trail runs south paralleling the South Vietnamese border. They are less than 30 miles west of Pleiku, South Vietnam.

Nixon May Not Speak in Campaign

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Nixon says he has no plans for campaign speeches this fall.

Vice President Spiro T. Agnew has lots of them.

His office says the vice president's calendar for September and October, when the congressional and senatorial contests are in full swing, is rapidly filling with speaking dates.

Anyone who has followed the popularity polls can see why Agnew's help is much sought after in this election year with 435 seats in the House and 35 in the Senate at stake.

Nixon told newsmen in Belleville, Ill., Thursday he feels he can best serve Republican candidates by making "as good a record as possible in Washington."

Any presidential involvement in the campaign, he said, will depend on international developments. "I have no plans for any speeches in October," he said.

Agnew's office says "an intensive campaign schedule is being arranged for most of those two months."

It is working in close cooperation with the Republican National Committee, and the campaign committees in the House and Senate.

The vice president proved to be a bigger drawing card than anyone thought in the spring and early summer when he criss-crossed the country, speaking at fund-raising affairs and throwing his most controversial jabs.

His role in political leadership was worked out by Nixon and Agnew in the early days of the administration and even before they came into office. The matter came up in their discussions of the role of the vice president in many areas.
